Now it's the real estate agents moving house

Peter Hooper joked he was too fast on a wing playing for South Clare in the North Eastern Football League to be collected by a wayward elbow from Rob Heaslip charging from centre half-back for North Clare in the 80s, but seriously, they are now closer than ever in a new field. They have surprised the local real estate industry by teaming to launch South Coast Realty. Rob has terminated his franchise with Raine & Horne, while Peter has left Harcourts after also earning enormous respect in an extremely challenging environment. Their new joint venture as principals involves retaining both the premises under the previous R&H banner in Ocean Street, Victor Harbor, and Cadell Street, Goolwa, and all staff members. Their property management remains unchanged. Rob said for a long time during his enjoyable 30 years in the industry he wanted to meet the challenge of 'going out on his own' and felt the new partnership with Peter, given his also impressive real estate background and strong standing within the community, was a perfect scenario.

"After 20 years with Elders, five with Toop & Toop and the last few with Raine & Horne, I felt I had a good cross-section with Elders being a 160-year-old company, Toops being innovative and always thinking outside of the box, and Raine & Horne being a steady-as-you-go company with a bit of the others blended," Rob said. "Once I had those qualities or experience behind me I knew I could extract the best from them. I then had to find the right person to share the experience, which I have with Peter."

It was 30 years ago this year that Peter managed his first business venture in Clare; a video rental store that finally closed down last year. The experience working with the community was obviously invaluable, and later in a big homemaking centre, but the ultimate plight of the video shop in today's ever changing multi-media environment is perhaps a reflection of a changing real estate world. Rob said there was a big swing from the corporate structure in all type of businesses or industries, more so in recent years, and it was also happening in real estate. "I saw it happen in the stock agency business in the 1980s," he added.

Coast Lines receives federal community heritage grant

Oscar Publications, trading as Coast Lines, has been awarded a grant from the Federal Government Department of Sustainability, Environment, Water, Population and Communities as part of its Your Community Heritage program for 2013-14.

It relates to Sharing Community Heritage Stories, one of five categories of the national program. Significantly, this was the only grant throughout South Australia for this term presented to a community publication.

The theme of our project is Living Our Heritage, and the series begins on P8-9. The aim is to focus on people across the southern Fleurieu and Kangaroo Island who are either a descendant of those who helped shape the pathways of our communities, or work closely with key elements of our history.

We will also talk to members of our Indigenous community who obviously know more than anyone where we have come from and how our heritage shapes our lives today, those involved with special places of interest, and members who can relate to the way things were through generations of their own family history. Living Our Heritage hopes to bring alive the magnificent taste of our environment so diligently recorded by historians and helped preserved by our councils and historical societies, and show that our heritage is actually all around us wherever we go.

We hope you enjoy the series: Living Our Heritage. Again, we thank you for your support.

— Ashley & Jenny Porter

From P2

"It's because the corporates had too much control; 'this is the way you will do it' they say. No longer being under any corporate banner means we can make decisions in the best interest of our vendors on the spot. It gives us more flexibility; we can now put together marketing packages which can suit individual homes, whereas under a corporate banner we were guided by certain protocol and processes."

Peter believes their new independent venture will allow South Coast Reality to provide marketing and advertising to best suit the property or home. "We can make decisions on the spot to help the vendor," he said.

"Regrettably, some industries are losing their local identity. We are pleased to announce we are expanding ours."

According to Rob, there is a new principal on board with new ideas. "Peter brings a lot of professionalism and enthusiasm to the business, and importantly all of the staff under the Raine & Horne banner are still with us," Rob said. We are actually looking for more staff; we want to grow the business.

"South Coast Reality may be new, but our combined experience in the real estate industry is 130-plus years... we have a very experienced team behind us. With the stability of our staff, and Peter coming on board, we believe we have the perfect mix.

Rob and Peter have been long entrenched in the community through sport, business and events, and their new venture has been totally structured using local businesses. "We have ticked all the local boxes, and we will continue with that policy," Rob said.

The wheel turns again at Rotary

Rotary International and many other service clubs that do an outstanding job for the community recently had their annual changeover in leadership.

Among the many other annual changes at Rotary, Gill Houlihan replaced Ken Carter as president at Encounter Bay, and Malcolm Haythorpe replaced Sue Ellers at Victor Harbor. Needless to say, the work and leadership of the outgoing presidents was again outstanding, and appropriately recognised by their respective organisations and clubs. The appreciation is always there.

The club leaders, indeed also their members, of all the service clubs make a remarkable contribution to their community and in most cases to worthy causes around the nation and overseas. They commit the time they believe they can spare, and the more members the easier the workload and the far greater net of friendship.

If you would like to join Rotary, Lions or any of the other fine service clubs, contact your local council which has all the contact details.

Nature is a playground

Where is the best place for children to play – in a natural environment like climbing trees, or in a colourful plastic and fantastic structure that we see in our parklands?

American-born Adam Bienenstock (pictured), an international expert in creating natural outdoor play spaces, believes there is no contest... let the kids discover themselves in a natural environment.

In a great example of cooperation within local government, the Alexandrina Council will join the Mid-Murray, Coorong and Murray Bridge councils as members of the OPAL program – Obesity Prevention and Lifestyle – at a workshop presented by Adam in Murray Bridge on Wednesday, July 31.

Adam, 48, lives near Toronto, Canada, in a Unesco World Biosphere Reserve called the Niagara Escarpment, and is recognised internationally as a renowned and award-winning consultant on design, construction, policy, risk and regulatory process for connecting children to nature.

The Murray Bridge workshop will focus on the reasons why it is important to be connecting children to nature, including more than 12 ways to naturalise a playground without the need to spend thousands of dollars.

Adam said at his seminars almost everyone puts their hands up when asked if they remembered playing unsupervised in a natural setting with the instruction to be home for dinner or before streetlights came on.

"We then ask how many would let their children out to play unsupervised until the streetlights came on and usually only two people in the audience apprehensively put up their hands," he added.

Not surprisingly, Adam said he was impressed by the OPAL program concept, which focuses on supporting children to eat well and be active. Alexandrina Council is one of 21 councils involved, and its OPAL manager Linda Scholz said this workshop came about through OPAL's endeavour to engage children in creative and active outdoor play.

"Children love playing outdoors – exploring, discovering and moving in natural environments," Linda said.

"Nature play is fundamental to a positive childhood, and has flow on benefits in health, cognitive, social and emotional development. It also allows children to build resilience and creativity.

"We hope the nature play workshops will create an understanding from our decision-makers within local councils... this becomes an important part of playground design and open space planning and development in all of our communities long term.

"Playgrounds can be quite rigid and structured. While these can serve a purpose in our schools and communities, we really want to explore more opportunities for children to engage in unstructured play in more natural environments."

Among many things, Adam serves as a board director at the Child and Nature Alliance, where he founded Nature Play Day, and is a teacher with the Certified Playground Safety Academy.

The Murray Bridge workshop, from 1-4.30pm, is by registration. Visit: www.opal.sa.gov.au

The spirit of our steamers

Ask a man how long does it take to repair his wooden boat and he'll say you never finish. Ask Roly Bartlett, revered by many as our nearest relative to the proverbial Old Man River, when did we learn all of the history on the River Port of Goolwa's once-thriving boatbuilding industry, and he says we haven't.

"It goes on forever," he adds with a grin highlighting his wind-struck facial lines that seems hereditary in these parts.

With some glee, Roly revealed it was only a few weeks ago that he and fellow Friends of the Oscar W group discovered Goolwa had a steam crane to unload at the docks. Perhaps not out of the ordinary to some, but for these volunteers an exciting sense of discovery. It became more enthralling when they learned the crane didn't work most of the time, causing frustration because unloading was incredibly slow. They used just two hand cranes to off-load goods, and then on to steam trains that were part of Australia's first-ever railway line, between Port Elliot and Goolwa. Roly, 77, said the fact-finding mission was a subtle reminder there was still so much to learn about our heritage; not a history recital, but an opportunity to add to a seemingly never-ending story that we can all share. "It's important for Goolwa," he said. "Our schoolchildren need to be aware so they can tell their grandchildren. I don't think Goolwa

LIVING OUR HERITAGE

Coast Lines is proud to present this series, which is part of a Sharing Community Heritage Stories project, a Federal Government funded program through the Department of Sustainability, Environment, Water, Population and Communities gets the recognition it deserves, and compared with some other places I don't think we are doing anywhere near enough to make our history known."

His own idyllic journey as a first-year high school student at Strathalbyn helping his grandfather John Jackling repair a hole-ridden boat that couldn't be used during war time because there was no petrol, to building a dinghy, a 16ft clinker boat christened Tubby, and other lone ventures like restoring an old mail boat operated by Miss Saunders at Woods Point, created amazing challenges as a young man.

However, Roly said that while his life story surrounding boats, indeed the history of his Jackling English forefathers who built a boat upon arriving in 1854 remained a personal special branch, it was nowhere near as important as his passion for Goolwa's heritage tree that we could all share.

With enormous pride, Roly said a significant turn in his life was when he successfully applied for a teaching appointment in tech studies at Victor Harbor High in 1984. "Eventually I got too involved in things to have time to go to school," he quipped. "My passion for paddle steamers coincided with the development of Signal Point by the Goolwa Wharf as Australia's 1988 Bicentenary was approaching. I became part of the Signal Point support group, which decided to invest in the steam-powered barge Dart, the last major vessel built at Goolwa in 1914 and rests below the bridge today. It was always thought the ship building industry stopped here in 1913, but again recent research has shown it was a year later.

"It was also a time when the Signal Point board, with Tom Chapman as chairman, was responsible for bringing the Oscar W here from a slip at Murray Bridge, thanks to financial support from Tourism SA and especially the Signal Point group. The Oskar W had big holes in her side, the steam engine wasn't functioning and there were plenty of other things in need of repair. We lost count how much it cost to fix, but we went to then Premier John Bannon with a price of $200,000 just to get it steamworthy, and 12 months later the Oscar W reached Goolwa where it was fully restored.

"It was all starting to take shape and the wharf was extended to cater for the Oscar W. I also became involved in the Armfield Slip (short distance from the wharf), which was part of the whole scene, and formed another group. We had no money, so we organised a 'sail past' of boats as part of the opening of Signal Point, which raised some funds."

The sail-past was the start of the South Australian Wooden Boat Festival, and another 12 biennial festivals later it has become a fabulous event on South Australia's tourism calendar. The Oscar W soon became surveyed meaning it could carry passengers, Roly became entrenched running the Friends of Oscar W group, and eventually the project was owned by the Alexandrina Council.

The group is close to completing a DVD highlighting boatbuilding in Goolwa between 1853-1913 (should now be 1914) revealing absorbing tales of adventure, indeed the fortitude behind the 61 boats attributed to being built in Goolwa.

Of them, 37 were paddle steamers. Importantly, some like the PS Cato and PS Providence had engines, boilers, winches and hulls completely made in Goolwa.

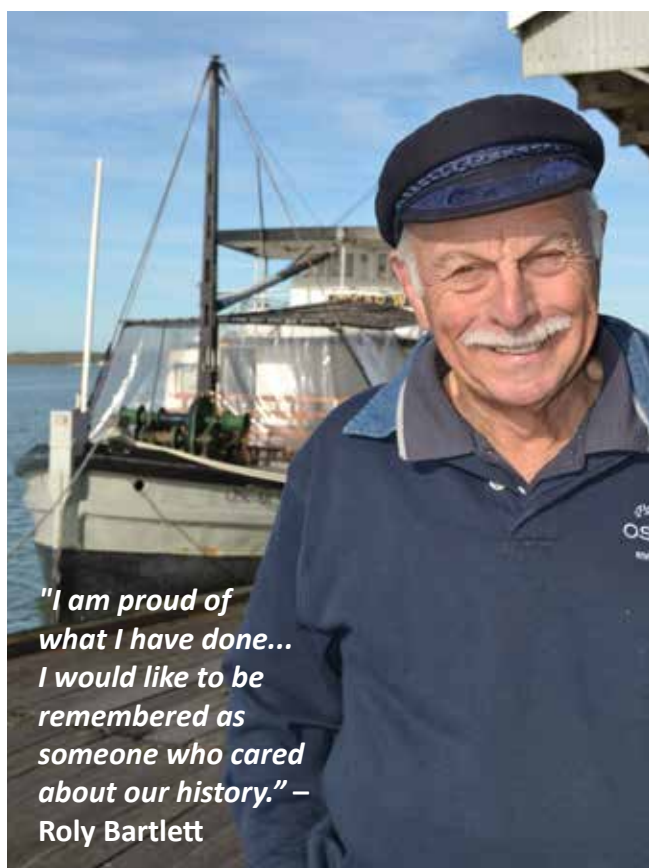

"There were other boats or steamers brought here in parts and then re-built. In 1854 Captain Francis Cadell as part of a deal with the state government, had two other steamers built by Napier & Sons, a shipbuilding company in Scotland – the Albury and the Gundagai – and brought them here in pieces to Port Elliot by wind jammer," Roly said.

"Unloading them at Port Elliot was said to be hopeless because of the small jetty. Somehow they put the pieces, including big boilers, on to a horsedrawn railway and took them to Goolwa. Cadell also brought 30 blokes from Scotland, including George Bain Johnson, who became a well-known river boat captain.

"There was a huge shipbuilding industry going on here... more than one boat a year from 1853-1914. Plus we had more than 2500 boat movements on the wharf from 1853-1890, so in those pioneering days it was busy. According to the newspaper, The Southern Argus, on any given day there were two or three boats unloading on the wharf."

Roly said our local history was constantly being discovered, offering reflections of challenges, heartbreaks and triumphs. "I am never surprised to learn something new," he said.

"I was speaking at a local Probus club meeting recently and a gentleman in the group said his neighbour dug up a piece of cast iron in his back yard that had the words 'Goolwa Foundry' on the back. That was the first time we had heard of a foundry here, and we further studied a wood-cut etching done by a bloke named Clint in 1868 of Goolwa looking from Hindmarsh Island and it showed a 30ft high chimney where the foundry must have

"I am proud of what I have done... I would like to be remembered as someone who cared about our history." – Roly Bartlett

According to Roly, the history of Goolwa and its surrounds offers stories of adventure that should capture the imagination of everyone, and would love them to be part of history lessons at every primary school."

History books reveal how in 1853 the Lieutenant-Governor of South Australia, Sir Henry Young, was convinced that the Murray River was Australia's Mississippi, and could be a trade route for New South Wales, Victoria and South Australia. There was a prize of £2000 offered to the captains of the first boats to travel by boat from the River Port of Goolwa to the Darling River junction, and it became a great race between Captain Francis Cadell in his paddle steamer, the Lady Augusta, and William Randell and his Mary Ann.

Francis Cadell took the prize, but it was the adventure and the importance of the event that needs to be learned. To me, this brings our local history to life.

There are so many other stories, including what happened to vessels like the PS Canberra, which was the last steamer made here in 1913. Roly says they are all part of our heritage, and it is why he would love this town to always be referred to as the River Port of Goolwa. "It says what we were about," he says. "I am proud of that."

Roly, however, is merely one of the many in this town who cares about its past. He would have made an outstanding history teacher, but then he says with tech studies there was always the opportunity to do history through practice; doing the hands-on bit by studying or making things the same way they did in the olden days. He doesn't want anything from our past lost, including the not-so glorious days when this once thriving town began to slow down with the old railway line diverted to Morgan in 1878, and the boatbuilding industry declining causing riverboat companies to amalgamate and ultimately disappearing in the early 1900s. Perhaps gone, but in Roly's eyes, never forgotten.

"I am proud of what I have done," Roly said. "I would like to be remembered as someone who cared about our history. It has given me a lot of enjoyment; it can be the same for everyone." CL

The Port Elliot game

Like Peter Allen sang, “... my-oh-me-oh we’re going to Rio”... de Janeiro for the 2014 FIFA World Cup, and in downtown Port Elliot they couldn’t be happier. According to Quentin Munro, who is president of the local club Southern Breakers, the Federation International de Football Association’s 2010 World Cup in South Africa prompted a sudden boost in kids wanting to play football – they refer to it as the ‘world game’ and most Australians call it soccer – and already some are coming out to training decked in their Socceroos green & gold gear in support of their new campaign. They’re talking about our captain Lucas Neill, how many goals Tim Cahill is going to score, and Sir Josh Kennedy, and while Quentin is naturally pleased with the revived enthusiasm leading up to the World Cup in Brazil from June 12-July 13, 2014, he says the most important thing is that children are keen to play sport.

“The Socceroos have had a big impact on the kids in our local competition; for sure,” Quentin said. “The last World Cup was a huge boost for us because all of a sudden there was more interest in the game. “We’re starting to see a few more kids out here in their Aussie tops and talking about the players because it’s on the telly. It has to lift the profile of soccer in the area. “But the greatest thing is that it is encouraging children to play sport – regardless of what sport. “For us it’s about getting them out there on the pitch playing small-sided games having a bit of fun. We’re so lucky that we have parents who want to help; some may not know the game well but they’re happy to help organise or coach a team to allow the kids to have a run-around and be active. That’s great. It’s all about fun.” CL

Above: These guys are having a great time at Port Elliot playing in the under-6s. For the record the blue team, the Lions, beat the Sharks, but this competition is all about having fun.

Welcome to Smart Home Vision Pty Ltd, an innovative company developed from a passion for eco sustainable living and organic architecture.

And selling or marketing a new home with those eco energy efficiency sustainable features including quality insulation, natural light, good cross ventilation, water-saving devices, solar energy, use of native landscaping around the home, or some of these characteristics for an existing home, is vital for vendors who have invested funds and have their own vision of their home.

Smart Home Vision Pty Ltd proudly delivers quality individual property services to its clients with innovative and cost-effective marketing solutions that highlight the unique features of their home or investment property.

The concept that a home is part of nature, and nature is part of the home, is not new. Famed American architect Frank Lloyd Wright built remarkable examples of that principal in Chicago, New York and Arizona in the 1930s. However, in modern times, building homes became a formula with emphasis on providing a home at an affordable cost catering for the basic needs of shelter and comfort. Energy efficiency or resource management or sustainability was not a high priority in that formula. Water was cheap and so too was energy, leaving everyone feeling plenty remained. With increasing population and expectations for better living standards, the demands on our resources are greater, and this is not sustainable. Why is it not sustainable? Because the resources need to be shared between agriculture, mining, industries, a growing population, and let's not forget nature; we experienced the consequences to the Murray River a few years ago.

This increasing demand for energy and resources means cost of electricity and water is increasing, impacting greatly on home budgets. Therefore, a residential building design should include passive heating and cooling, and with the ability to generate electricity and store a minimum of 10,000 Lt of water plumbed to the house allowing tremendous savings on energy costs without compromising on comfort of living.

“Listening to my client's individual needs is what I do best”

Sylvie Clarke, the Director and licensed real estate agent of Smart Home Vision Pty Ltd, is originally from France, and travelled numerous countries in her youth. Having lived in Australia in the 70s as a child, she migrated back to Australia in 1983, and proudly calls Australia home. Sylvie has two sons, Anthony and Christopher, who live in Adelaide, and her parents, Jacques and Colette, now reside in Victor Harbor. Sylvie purchased a home in Victor Harbor in July, 2011 after commuting from Strathalbyn for a year and working as finance manager for Regional Development Australia Adelaide Hills, Fleurieu and Kangaroo Island Inc (RDA).

Sylvie was an active member of the Cancer Council SA's magnificent Relay for Life program in the Adelaide Hills, and is currently treasurer for the Fleurieu Festival of Sports Incorporated, a newly-formed organisation planning to bring sports events like the Masters Games to the region in 2015.

Importantly, Sylvie believes in community involvement as a volunteer to benefit the community. Before starting her own business, she had worked for 15 years in finance and marketing in aged care, construction, services, the wine industry and real estate in the Barossa Valley, Adelaide, and now in the Fleurieu. Sylvie has a wealth of professional experience both in marketing and individual property services, and is certified to perform home sustainability assessment.

“Listening to my client's individual needs is what I do best,” Sylvie said. “Working in partnership with my clients to get the best result possible for the sale of their property is essential.”

Lakeside Goolwa

update

Vol. 1, No.6 JULY, 2013

Great news! Housing

Construction Grant extended

Home builders have received great news with the South Australian Government extending the Housing Construction Grant until the end of December 2013.

The cut-off was to be June 30, but with a significant announcement during the new state budget, there is more time to reap the huge benefits.

It means a significant saving of $8500 on the price of the already affordable homes here at Lakeside Goolwa. The grant applies to anybody buying a home here at Lakeside Goolwa irrespective of whether you have already owned a home.

The news has already brought positive response from the increasingly confident market. With the offer ending at the end of the year, it pays to get in early and join the other people that have already taken up this fantastic discount.

Recent BBQ Day

Our BBQ day on Sunday, June 16 was a great success with a lovely time had by all.

Here at Lakeside Goolwa we surprised everyone with a boat cruise down the magnificent River Murray straight from our own private Marina. The group (pictured) also could not have wished for better weather... this is Lakeside Goolwa living.

Keep an eye out in Coast Lines and on our Facebook page www.facebook.com/LakesideGoolwa for updates on further Lakeside Goolwa events.

Sales

Stage 1 is selling fast with many people taking advantage of the great pricing available in Stage 1 with two bedroom homes from $279,500.

Included in this great price at no extra cost:

- 1.6w solar panel system
- 7Kw air conditioner
- Dishwasher
- Rainwater tank
- All floor coverings
- Paving
- Landscaping
- Fencing

Plus... a turn-key house that you just have to move into!

Chris Waterman

The association we proudly announced in last month's update with Sellers Advocate Chris Waterman has been very popular with many of our recent purchasers using his services to help them with the process of selling their existing house.

At the rate we are going poor Chris is going to be rushed off his feet!

Helping local business grow

Advertorial

The Goolwa & District Bendigo Bank has formed an innovative partnership with the Southern Alexandrina Business Association to help small businesses in the community.

Your community bank will sponsor a series of six seminars "How to Grow your Business" within this new financial year, starting with a presentation by Deidre Albrighton, chief executive of Albrighton Training & Consulting Services, at the Goolwa Bowling Club, Church Place, Goolwa on Thursday, July 27. The subject will be "how to grow your business using social media".

The new sponsorship also involves your community bank making available its own people in specific areas of expertise available to make presentations.

The overall concept is designed to help the SABA support local business, which is the basic principle of the G&DCBB – to support the community so the community can in return support the G&DCBB so it can support the community even more. In other words, profits go back into the community. There are no catches; it is a simple win situation for the community, and anyone can be involved.

Significantly, it has always been part of the G&DCBB's charter to help the community, which of course includes small businesses. In many cases they may not have the resources – especially staff – to be able to attend key seminars to help their business grow, so the G&DCBB is supporting the SABA to take the most relevant information sessions to them. The G&DCBB is proudly a member of SABA, and if you would also like to join please contact its president Andrew Stewart on 8555 1534. The dates and subjects for the other SABA "how to grow your business" seminars on Thursday nights, 6.30 for 7.30 with venues to be advised, are: September 27...planning for your personal future; November 28 ...planning for your business future; February 27...maximising the use of technology; April 24 ...better cash flow management; June 26 ...knowing your customers better and who are they?

If you are interested in these seminars, please ask our staff or visit: www.saba.org.au

There is a snag

The local G&DCBB team will be at the front of the action on Saturday, July 27 – running a sausage sizzle at the Goolwa Netball Club courts. It's all about helping them to raising funds to meet the high cost of providing youngsters the opportunity to enjoy playing sport. On the oval will be some other great rivalry – the Magpies taking on Victor Harbor in football. Your community bank is also supporting junior and senior football in Goolwa, so look out for the signs. You may recall that last year the G&DCBB pledged $15,000 to help this rapidly-expanding netball club fulfill a dream of establishing new facilities as part of a huge upgrade of the sporting complex. Again, it's about your bank helping your community, but we also need your support. You're welcome to drop in for a sausage to help as wonderful hard-working club.

Giving support where it is needed

Our friendly Piggy E Bank was wandering the Goolwa Shopping Centre mall recently on a mission – to help present more cheques to community groups from the Goolwa & District Community Bendigo Bank. G&DCBB chairman Carol Gaston welcomed recipients (pictured), and impressed onlookers when she made the presentations to representatives from the University of the Third Age, the Scout and Guide Hall, Goolwa, Port Elliot Primary School, Southern Fleurieu Cancer Support Group, Port Elliot Town & Foreshore Improvement Association, and Goolwa Day Care Centre. This takes its donations to almost $70,000 over the past three years, making it the most significant local sponsorship projects.

Travelling or sending money overseas?

Before you or your money go, visit Bendigo.

Whether you're sending money overseas or planning a trip of a lifetime, Bendigo Bank offers a comprehensive range of solutions to cater for all your foreign exchange and travel needs.

This is 5EFM on your smile dial

Atad over 40 years ago radio 5DN legend Jeff Medwell, the original late night talk-back king of the city, told a budding young reporter in the old building of The News that he had a great voice for newspapers and looks only suitable for radio.

Maybe the 35 or more volunteer presenters on our local community station Five Encounter FM – the Sound of the Fleurieu – also once copped brutally-sharp rejection and are now determined to prove their ability and live their on-air dream.

It's the only explanation as to why these dedicated souls turn up – some at ungodly hours of the morn – for their shift to dedicate some easy-listening music to us, or suggest how we should care for our Chrysanthemums if they have been invaded by aphids or have foliar nematodes. Hello, I'm Neville Skewes and welcome to In Your Garden show.

This is our community radio, and these volunteers love every moment. It's a hectic experience, sometimes nerve-wracking like the odd occasion when program manager Maree Phillips bursts into the office of station manager John Mann and declares a crisis: "So-and-so is supposed to be on-air in one hour and cannot make it."

Someone always steps up to the plate, for this is more than just a local radio gig; it's a belief the world cannot go on without the airwaves, and this profound passion is equally as fierce among the other 25-or-so volunteers working feverishly behind the scenes to also make it all happen.

However, while pop band Bruce Woolley & the Camera Club claimed in 1979 through their hit Video Killed the Radio Star, it seems that time is now slowly killing the whole community radio station.

When 5EFM was launched on October 11, 1991 as the first community radio station on the Southern Fleurieu Peninsula on a wave-length of 89.3MHz from a low-powered transmitter, there was more excitement than when Dick and Mac McDonald opened the original McDonald's restaurant in San Bernardino, California in 1937. This was new FM radio, opposed to a static 5MU from Murray Bridge and 5AN on the AM band. But like Bruce and his Camera Club warned, times change, and John pin-points 2004 when all of the city-based commercial stations were updated with 20Kw output, and we could hear them all from Adelaide. Then along came Nova and Power FM, which long followed another community station in Victor Harbor.

"The feeling amongst the community towards their community radio has changed," John said. "When 5EFM started there was no internet and iPods, and kids weren't listening to music on mobile phones.

"We are now fighting for survival because there are too many stations in the one spot here in Victor Harbor; we get most of them from the city and Goolwa gets the lot clearly." Yet, John and his amazing team are success-driven as ever, and genuinely believe that if more people knew about their community station 89.3 on your dial along the South Coast or 94.7 in Yankalilla and Strathalbyn, the future would be far rosier.

"Everyone here still has the enthusiasm to have a community radio station for the community," John said. "We have to raise all of the money to run the station ourselves and we love doing it all, but it is really a case of us trying to keep up with time because everything is changing.

"To change, we need more listeners, and to do that we need to get the message out, but that means advertising that costs money which we don't have."

It costs 5EFM more than $15,000 each year in electricity and telephone bills, plus insurance before it goes to air, and then another $5000 in licence fees.

Soon after John, a retired technical field officer for Telstra in Adelaide, started at the station in 2000 he noticed most of the equipment had Cash Converters stickers on the back.

Through the carefully-managed eight-member 5EFM board, John then arranged two $10,000 loans to help get the station working on a near-even footing.

Remarkably, the loans were paid off in four years, but like everything in the partly dilapidated building the station operates from on Seaview Road, nothing comes easily.

"We have to earn every cent, and everything is done by volunteers," John said with a tone of pride. "We rely on sponsorship; hard work and fundraising. We have a clothing sale at the Victor Harbor RSL Hall from July 5-17, and film night featuring the new movie, Liberace on August 15.

"Oh, Liberace... above everything, he was a good pianist. It's fair to say a percentage of our listeners would know him, but I doubt whether the young ones would."

Beyond the hands-on fundraising work are the paid commercials, but unfortunately they don't add up to much. 5EFM is expected to strictly adhere to the same regulations under the Broadcasting Services Act (1992) as commercial stations, yet being a community station is restricted to only five minutes of advertising or sponsorship per hour. The advertising rates are $3 per 30 seconds. "It's not easy surviving financially," John said. That becomes obvious when you see an honesty jar by the tin of coffee; inflation forcing a rise from 10 cents to 50 cents per cup, and John fears the price may need to jump to a dollar to cover costs. Here, there is absolutely no tangible reward, only cost for the volunteers, but they never complain and turn up every day.

There is a near-empty petty cash tin, and if you consider that as intolerable you can help by taking out an annual membership to the station for $10.

This may seem gloomy, and John admits to thinking at times about the station's survival rate, but the next moment the station is just one big buzz with everyone focused on everything that is positive about the station and doing their best to present wholesome entertainment. Again, the constant reminder that 5EFM is the only station that broadcasts right across the southern Fleurieu is heartening, and with it comes responsibility. On any day you'll find examples of teamwork with John's wife, Dianne, helping those at the front desk including Annie and Peter, Jenny Sandell busy working in production alongside her husband Jack, and David Elliott being constantly called upon for his technical assistance and other production skills. The list of contributors runs deep with passion; all volunteers with coffee in hand at 50 cents a cup. But more help is needed; here's your chance for a taste of radio.

John cannot pour enough praise on the presenters for the incredible amount of time and effort they put into their shows. The last hint of controversy was when someone rang 5EFM and said it could hardly call the 4-6 time slot "Drive Time Radio" because he gets home before the track finishes. It caused a laugh. John says ABC radio commands 50 per cent of the listening audience in this section of our radio world, and is convinced 25% of radio listeners in Victor follow 5EFM. They should; the music is great and you can find out how to stop your Hydrangeas from wilting. It's why John turns up at the station four days a week from 9am-4pm, and is on call around the clock in case the world of radio has a momentary pause. Some days he wakes up with a hollow feeling that "this is it" for the station, but he goes to bed with the satisfaction no one here in this old building – once home to Meals on Wheels – has given up. As dear Jeff Medwell used to say, 'thank you for joining me'. He was probably right about that young bloke at The News; he still doesn't look pretty in the morning (sigh!) CL

Shanks a lot, Sweetie Pie

An occasion never to be missed is the annual Shank Off at Currency Creek Winery; three chefs preparing their own special lamb shank dish and guests voting who should receive a Golden Knuckle. At first, Mrs P declined to go there as a date – a medieval affair on July 20 – fearing the heading of this page would be “Shanks a lot” which has been literally written a thousand times. She still doesn’t know me; I’m not that childish. The compromise was a luncheon at the Currency Creek Winery on Winery Road, featuring chef Kevin Boonham, one of the three shank contestants this month along with the equally-creative and skilled Richard Burkett and Paul Curzon. Brilliant idea to come here for lunch. It was miserably wet and cold outside, but the greeting by Rakiah, who assisted us, and the sensational fire in a cast iron circular cage was warming, along with a view of a magnificent red gum in front of a valley with reeds towering above the Currency Creek. Good start, and chef Kevin wasn’t about to let us down either.

The stand-out on the menu wasn’t simply a tender steak or a fish dish, which seemed really nice, but the numbers alongside each item – the price. For some, going out to lunch is okay, but the bill can be a huge setback. Not here, which was surprising given the ambience and the fabulous dishes on offer.

The starters set the pace; Blue Swimmer Crab Cakes served with a regional salad accompanied by an Asian-style dipping sauce. Price $16 – and enough for two. Caused a stir with recollections of when Mrs P went crabbing and was seen throwing away the blue ones, claiming the red ones were nicer. Anyway, we persisted (snigger, snigger), and the cakes – four of them – were brilliant. You must try them.

The other choice was Seared Scallops with honey and lemon dressing served with a pot of beetroot risotto. Price: $18. Both starters were seriously good, and the serves represented terrific value. Now for the mains. Mrs P went for a Breast of Duck served crispy skinned with a blackberry and lemon thyme sauce, pan friend savoy cabbage and confit potatoes. Price: $28. Again, succulent. This was one of those dishes that you may feel intimidated about cooking at home, so the experience was definitely rewarding. Hey, this is what you are supposed to pay for. Yours went for a hamburger. Yep, a hamburger, but this was no ordinary hamburger. The Winery Burger came with bacon, tomato, caramelised onions, aioli, salad leaves and melted cheddar cheese with a traditional seeded bun with crunchy fries. Price: $17.50. If you enjoy a damn good, fresh hamburger, you have got to try one of these. Outstanding. Mrs P tried Currency Creek Sparkling Shiraz at $7 per glass (or $27 bottle), and Rakiah was right; a perfect drop for the meal and occasion. Yours had enjoyed a cold Cascade light. Why can’t hotels have them cold too? Again, the perfect combination, and most satisfying.

Mrs P refused to leave without trying the Sticky Date Pudding served with butterscotch sauce and vanilla icecream – all of the desserts are $11.50. The response was ‘I’ve got to meet this chef’ which obviously meant our Big Kev had hit another winner. Right throughout the luncheon she could only say “Kev cooks it like this, Kev does that.” For goodness sakes, have another Sparkling Shiraz. “I’d like to try his shanks,” Mrs P now moans. By this stage the Affogattos with liqueur were definitely out of the question.

Seriously, this was a great luncheon experience; sensational food at very reasonable prices, and with good service – the perfect place to take friends for any occasion.

It seems that we are now going to the Shank Off on July 20. You don’t know who you are voting for; it better not be for Kev. And Rakiah, please hide the Shiraz.

CAR CARE with GRAND NISSAN Morphett Vale

The team at Grand Nissan Morphett Vale is committed to helping you get the best possible life out of your car, and there are also numerous small but significant ways that you can play a role.

For instance, don't rev your car excessively during start-up... it adds years of wear to your engine, especially during these cold mornings.

Accelerate slowly when you drive off... the most wear to the engine and drive train occurs in the first 20 minutes of operation.

Warming the engine by letting it idle in the driveway is not a smart idea... the engine doesn't operate at its peak temperature resulting in incomplete fuel combustion, soot deposit on cylinder walls, oil contamination and ultimately damaged components.

It's also best to put less strain on your engine and automatic transmission by shifting to neutral at red lights. Otherwise, the engine is still working to push the car even while it's stopped. Feel free to call in any time at Grand Nissan to ask how you can best look after your car, or visit the website: grandnissan.com.au Avoid driving at high speeds and accelerating quickly, especially when it's very hot or very cold outside. Such driving behavior will result in more frequent repairs – and possibly accidents. When turning your steering wheel, don't hold it in an extreme right or left position for more than a few seconds; it can damage the power-steering pump.

You old charmer

Bob, a 70-year-old, extremely wealthy widower, shows up at the country club with a breathtakingly beautiful and very sexy 25-year-old woman.

Everyone is amazed by her youthful sex appeal and charm, and how she hangs over Bob's arm and listens intently to his every word.

His mates at the club are all aghast. At the very first chance, they ask: "Bob, how did you get the trophy girlfriend?" Bob says: "Girlfriend? She's my wife."

They are stunned. They ask: "So, how did you persuade her to marry you?" Bob confessed: "I lied about my age."

One mate asks: "Did you tell her you were only 50?"

Bob smiles and says: "No, I told her I was 97."

The perfect girl

Sam is 32-years-old and still single.

A mate asks: "Why aren't you married... can't you find a woman who will be a good wife?"

Sam replies: "Actually, I've found many women I wanted to marry, but when I bring them home to meet my parents, my mother doesn't like them."

His mate says: "I've got the perfect solution; just find a girl who's just like your mother."

A few months later they meet again and his friend asks: "Did you find the perfect girl that your mother liked?"

Sam frowns and says: "Yes, I found the perfect girl. She was just like my mother. You were right; my mother liked her very much."

The mate says: "Then what's the problem?"

And Sam says: "My father doesn't like her."

Big deal

Reaching the end of a job interview, the human resources manager asks a young man what starting salary he's looking for.

The young man replies: "In the region of $150,000 a year, depending on the benefits package."

The HR manager says: "Well, what would you say to a package of five weeks annual leave, company matching super fund to 50% of salary, and a company car leased every two years, say, a red BMW?"

The young man says: "Wow! Are you kidding?"

And the HR manager says: "Yes, but you started it."

Star sign

A university professor is called to the scene of a magnificent celestial display at Middleton. As he watches a bright object dash through the skies the media gathers around him. Journalists from all over the world push and shove to ask a questions.

A reporter asks: "Professor, what we have just seen; was it really a UFO?"

And the professor says: "No comet."

Storm brewing

A married couple is sleeping in the Riverland when the phone rings at two o'clock in the morning.

The wife picks up the phone, listens for a moment and says: "How should I know, that's 200 kilometers from here" and hangs up.

The husband says: "Who was that?"

The wife answers: "I don't know, some woman wanting to know if the coast was clear."

Dad jokes

What starts with a P, ends with an E and has thousands of letters in it? Post office.

What is a teacher's favorite kind of music? Class-ical.

Where do stars and planets go to school? University.

“ It can be exhausting eating a meal cooked by a man. With a woman, it's, Ho hum, pass the beans. A guy, you have to act like he just built the Taj Mahal.”

— Deb Caletti, American-born literature & fiction writer

Let's cook with dairy by Rebekah

Joan's Pork Stroganoff with three mustards

This is a terrific winter supper dish for two people, taking only a quarter of an hour to prepare from start to finish. Alexandrina crème fraiche does add a depth of flavour and creaminess to this dish, without it being too heavy or overwhelming. Serve it with steamed rice and a salad of green leaves. Serves 2

Ingredients

350g pork tenderloin
110 g small open mushrooms
1 level teaspoon mustard powder
1 heaped teaspoon Dijon mustard
1 heaped teaspoon wholegrain mustard
250 ml Alexandrina Crème Fraiche (Sour Cream)
1 dessert spoon olive oil
10 g Australian butter
1 brown onion, halved and thinly sliced
75 ml dry white wine
salt and black pepper
fresh herbs to garnish

Method

Prepare the pork by trimming it and cutting it into thin strips. The recommended size is three inches or 7.5cm long by quarter inch or 5mm wide.

Then prepare the mushrooms by slicing them through the stalk into thin slices.

In a small bowl mix together the three mustards and the Alexandrina Crème Fraiche. Take a solid frying pan, heat the butter and oil together over a medium heat, add the onion slices and fry them gently.

Usually the mushrooms are ready within 2-3 minutes until they are soft.

Then, using a draining spoon, remove the onion to a plate, turn the heat up to its highest setting.

When the pan is smoking-hot add the strips of pork and fry them quickly.

Keep the pork strips on the move all the time so they cook evenly without burning. After that add the mushrooms and toss these around to cook very briefly until their juices start to run.

Next return the onion slices to the pan and stir them in.

Season well with salt and pepper.

Add the wine and let it bubble reduce slightly before adding the Alexandrina Crème Fraiche mixture.

Now stir the whole lot together and let the sauce bubble and reduce to half its original volume.

Then serve the pork stroganoff immediately spooned over steamed rice, and use fresh herbs to garnish.

Serve with a tossed green salad.

Tip: Cook this recipe a day before. If you have a slow cooker with a timer, set the dial so that it starts to reheat by the time you need it warm for your evening meal.

Thank you to a wonderful farmers market customer, Joan of Port Willunga for sharing that recipe with Rebekah almost a decade ago!

Bacon & Vegetable Risotto

Ingredients

2 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon butter
1 small onion, chopped
1 teaspoon crushed garlic
4 rashers short bacon
¼ cup white wine
2 cups arborio rice
1 medium carrot, diced
1 small zucchini, chopped
½ cup corn kernels
6 cups chicken or vegetable stock
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
salt & pepper to season
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Method

Heat oil and butter in a large frying pan on medium heat. Add onion and bacon, and fry until onion is transparent. Stir in garlic; heat for one minute. Add arborio rice and continue stirring over medium heat until rice becomes opaque (about 3-5 minutes). Stir in white wine and heat for a minute. Reduce heat; stir in two cups of chicken stock. Allow to simmer over low heat until stock has been absorbed. Stir in another cup of stock. Repeat until rice is tender and creamy (about 25-30 min.) – stir occasionally to prevent rice sticking to bottom of pan. If all stock is used and rice is not completely cooked, hot water can be added. Just before serving season with salt and pepper, and stir through parsley and Parmesan cheese. Serves 4. Chorizo sausage can be used in place of bacon, or meat can be omitted for a vegetarian dish. Other vegetables can be added, e.g. mushrooms, tomatoes, peas.

It's a tie in the Investigator yard

From back page

“We had fairly strong input from the Association of Independent Schools, of which we are part, that this was one of the big differentials for parents; to actually see professionally-dressed persons.

“If I went to a bank manager or a doctor who was wearing thongs and shorts, or jeans, it would not be seen as appropriate professional dress, so why should it not be the same for teachers?”

“If we are asking students to dress appropriately – and seeking the cooperation of parents – then we as teachers need to set an example. The kids are in an environment that gets them ready for emersion in the outside world. It teaches them standards including appropriate dress and behavior.”

Again, some may think we're getting old thinking about 'how things used to be', but it's nice to hear some standards have remained. Many employers might think so, anyway.

EAT WAVE with Jenny... on the cold front

Apple Tarte Tatin

Ingredients

Softened butter for greasing
120g brown sugar
25 butter, chopped
3 large Granny Smith apples, peeled, cored and sliced thinly
1 sheet frozen puff pastry, thawed

Method

Pre-heat oven to 180°C. Line a 23cm flan tin/cake tin, or a 22cm x 11cm loaf pan with baking paper. Grease the top of the paper with a small amount of softened butter. Spread brown sugar evenly over the base and distribute chopped butter on top, then sprinkle with cinnamon. Arrange sliced apples over the sugar, overlapping slightly. Cut the puff pastry in a shape to cover the apples completely, and gently lay it over the top. Place in pre-heated oven and bake for 40 minutes. Remove from oven and let cool for ten minutes. Invert apple tarte tatin onto serving dish by placing dish tightly upside-down over the top of the apple tarte tatin and flipping it over quickly, being careful not to let any sauce escape. Serve warm with cream and/or ice cream. This Tarte Tatin can be made with pears and ingredients can be adjusted to suit different sized baking dishes.

Yoghurt Scones

Ingredients

1¼ cup self-raising flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
1 level tablespoon sugar
½ cup vanilla yoghurt
½ cup milk

Method

Preheat the oven to 220°C. Line a baking tray with baking paper. Sift the flour, baking powder, and salt into a medium bowl. Make a hole in the middle and add the yoghurt, then using a rounded knife, stir in enough milk to make a sticky dough. Turn onto a floured board and knead very gently, just to combine (do not over-knead). Pat the dough into a round approximately 3cm thick, and cut into wedges or small rounds (using a scone cutter). Place the scones on the prepared baking tray, allowing a small amount of room for expansion. Bake for 15-20 minutes, or until the scones are golden on top. Serve warm with butter, jam or honey. Makes 8 small scones.

*We used Gippsland smooth & creamy vanilla yoghurt in this recipe.

Playing sport is Brian's racket

Brian Odgers is 83, and only 5ft 2 in the old measurements, but don't tell him he's too old to be active.

Monday nights it's table tennis for Waitpinga in the Great Southern association. Tuesday is golf day at the Victor Harbor Golf Club, Wednesday it's golf at the West Lakes Golf Club (formerly Riverside), Thursday is golf again at Victor, Friday afternoon is table tennis again plus putting practice at the golf club, and Saturday is tennis at Hindmarsh Valley.

There is also 'night owls' in lawn bowls, and in between all of this he repairs and polishes old golf putters as a hobby, and strings his old racquets with a machine that he used at the Oliver Racquet Factory on Anzac Highway, Keswick, where he worked 40 years ago.

"I see my wife Suzanne sometimes," Brian (pictured) says with a sheepish grin. Actually, a lot over their 40 years of marriage.

The sporting love also goes back to playing football for Brompton – his brother Allen was a speedy, spindly wingman for North Adelaide – and squash as a youngster, but without doubt his biggest passion has always been tennis. It will be 70 years ago next year that he won the state under 14 SA Hardcourt Championship singles at Goodwood, and overall he won 58 inter-association tournaments.

Brian, who moved from the city to Encounter

Bay 14 years ago, obviously loves his sport, but he has never professed to be better or keener than anyone else. He likes to think there are other 'sports nuts' like him within our midst. "I just hope people continue to play sport for the fun of it as long as they possibly can," Brian said. "It's not about how good you are, just being active."

"Sport has always been good to me; it has given me so many friends throughout my life, and I am still meeting new people through playing table tennis. It's a great sport and I encourage anyone at any age to play."

"All these years later I can still recall all of the great times at Easter tournaments in Mount Gambier for tennis, and in the Riverland for golf."

Perhaps Brian's biggest sporting injury was recently when he took the skin off the top of his fingers on his right hand when he fell during a tennis game, forcing him on the sidelines for a few weeks. But he will be back. Included in the sporting reel highlights are two holes in one, at West Lakes, where he also worked in the club-pro shop for 10 years, and in 2001 at the seventh at Victor Harbor. To show he's just like any golfer he moans that his handicap has drifted, from 11 to 18, which is still pretty good for an 83-year-old. But then, we're not allowed to remind him that he is... well, a mature sportsman. Good on him.

It's a tie in the Investigator yard

They call it changing fashion. There were days when high school students copped a bamboo cane for not wearing a tie properly, and now for many years haven't worn one at all because of a clash with the jeans. And the teachers also went from wearing a tie to the same abysmal decline in dress standards.

Okay, some people may see this trivial and suggest "get with the times", but try and get a professional job if you don't dress well, and how can you learn that if the teachers have no dress sense either?

Well, a funny thing happened. There was a group of gentlemen in town all wearing ties, and the first thought was a doctors and lawyers convention – and these days even a lot of them don't wear a tie. In fact, they were teachers from Investigator College.

It seems the teachers themselves thought that, if they were asking students to look neat and wear a school uniform, then what right did they have as teachers not look appropriate either?

Andrew Panozzo, deputy principal at Investigator College, Victor Harbor, said most of the male staff wore a tie and suit anyway, but it actually got moved as a staff issue.

"We saw that as a point of difference between ourselves and other schools and institutions," Andrew said.
