January

This month

January is named after the Latin word for door (ianua), since January is the door to the year and an opening to new beginnings. January's birthstone is the garnet, which represents constancy. Garnets (with the colour above) are a group of silicate minerals that have been used since the Bronze Age as gemstones and abrasives.

Australia Day

January 26 commemorates the day the commander of the First Fleet, Captain Arthur Phillip, rowed ashore at Sydney Cove, raised the Union Jack and proclaimed British sovereignty over part of the continent in 1788. In other words, they invaded the land of the traditional Aboriginal owners. The first "Australia Day" was actually held on July 30, 1915 to raise funds for the World War I effort. It wasn't until 1935 that all states adopted a common date and name for Australia Day to be held on January 26. It did not become a national holiday until the 1940s.

The flag of Australia is a defaced Blue Ensign, a blue field with the Union Jack in the canton (upper hoist quarter), and a large white seven-pointed star known as the Commonwealth Star in the lower hoist quarter. The fly contains a representation of the Southern Cross constellation, made up of five white stars – one small five-pointed star and four, larger, seven-pointed stars.

Five things you may not know about Australia

1. The Australian coat of arms features two endemic animals; an emu and a kangaroo. They can only move forward, which is widely considered a symbol of progress and represents the notion that the country is never going backwards.
2. The image of the boxing kangaroo has been known since at least 1891 when a cartoon appeared in a Melbourne magazine, Punch. Another image was used on RAAF planes during WWII. Sporting wise, it received international prominence in 1983 when the boxing kangaroo flag, a red-gloved golden kangaroo on a green background, was flown from Alan Bond's yacht Australia II during the America's Cup Challenge. Bond owned the image and licensed it for mass production. The image was later bought by the Australian Olympic Committee, and is used as a mascot to represent the Australian Olympic team and to promote sport and fair play in schools.

3. When you compare the land size of Australia with the land size of the contiguous 48 states of America, Australia is only 7.692 sq.m smaller, yet the population of the USA is 323.1 million compared with Australia's 24.1 million (2016 Census).

4. More than 80 per cent of the plants, mammals, reptiles and frogs found in Australia are unique to the continent and not found elsewhere in the world. Some of the best-known species of endemic animals include the koala, kangaroo, dingo, echidna, platypus, wallaby and wombat.

5. There are more than 200 languages spoken in Australia including 45 different indigenous languages. The most popular spoken after English are Italian, Greek, Cantonese, Arabic, Vietnamese and Mandarin.

Year of cleaning up

The United Nations declared 2018 as the International Year of the Clean and Healthy Planet. September 8 has also been set aside as World Clean Up Day with the aim to mobilise hundreds of millions of people in a single day event to clean up illegal waste. It's a joint initiative of the Let's Do It Foundation, which since being established in Estonia in 2008 has engaged 16 million million people. But shouldn't all this happen every day? Let's do that instead.

Kieran hopes Tour Down Under will boost local cycling

Stages three and five of the sensational Santos Tour Down Under are coming to the Fleurieu Peninsula with some of the world's best cyclists flashing past from January 14-22, but it's not all just about the men.

Kieran Secombe, pictured on our front cover, reminds us that there is also the Santos Women's Tour Down Under from January 11-14, and remarkably it has been upgraded to be just one level below World Tour status.

According to Kieran, cycling is a sport that can ultimately place young boys and girls on the world stage, and she is hoping this 20th TDU will inspire youngsters to join a cycling club and give the sport a try.

"Not every child can play ball sports well, and cycling is such great fun," Kieran said. "I have been riding for almost five years and at first I didn't really like it that much.

"But when I bought a good bike that all changed. Now I have dream-ride days. I participate in sport in the open air; there is no impact on my joints, and I can ride along as often as I want, in a group or in competition." Kieran jokes she is definitely the disciplined cyclist in her family - with husband, Matt, she has two children, Georgia, 14, and Parker, three - but adds cycling can be something special for a family.

Like any sport, the equipment can be as expensive, and Kieran has two special bikes including a Giant Liv (TT) bike, competes in triathlons, and has enjoyed success. She formed the Victor Harbor Triathlon Club two years ago and the local coaching club, but importantly, she said, there are also social cycling groups for all ages.

"The best thing to do is go to your local bike shop and ask what's in your area," Kieran said. "They tend to know all of the groups that may suit you, and they can also advise on the appropriate bikes to buy. They genuinely care about cycling as a sport."

Families have the opportunity to ride under the official UCI WorldTour finish arch at Victor Harbor as part of the Bupa Family Ride on Thursday, January 18. They may take the big stage together, riding laps of the UCI World Tour tracks just hours before the world's elite cyclists hit the streets. Participants will take on the Stage 3 finish straight, riding laps along the esplanade. Bike trailers and child seats welcome. Cost is $30 for one adult + child. Additional family members $5 each. Building more bridges

Eli Bickley laughed at himself when he innocently commented that The Marina Hindmarsh Island needed to make a lot of bridges.

It was the construction and opening of the current one 2001 that stirred the emotion and rattled cages, and remains a sensitive issue, as does the entire island development. However, Eli Bickley, the new general manager of Mill Hill Capital, the consortium that acquired The Marina Hindmarsh Island (TMHI) in late November, was referring to a need for everyone both sides of the bridge to see these 18 hectares in a new light.

Eli (pictured) doesn't dismiss the history, nor the efforts of Tom and Wendy Chapman who developed the marina. "It is important that we acknowledge the past and the important vision they had all those years ago," he said. "It is instrumental where we are now. If the Chapman did not have that vision the bridge would not have happened, the marina would not have happened and the ongoing development would not have happened. That is an amazing vision they had.

"What we need to do now is build on that; bring things back to a point where TMHI is considered on-par or in excess of any other marina in Australia."

Among many things, Mill Hill Capital operates quality residential, retirement and tourism accommodation through Australia. It has come in to enhance THMI development and further raise the profile of Hindmarsh Island overall, thus raising of the value of the 1167 dwellings (Census 2016).

Major changes at THMI are still to come, but already walls have been knocked down in the office which has been spruced up by sorely needed paint and restructured to incorporate a pop-up grocery area for the benefit of nearby residents. There are new moves to have post office boxes for the 1250 or more who live on the island. This is not just about a marina, but the life of an island named by Captain John William Dundas Blenkinsop 180 years ago. Thank goodness he didn't name it after himself.

The Landing restaurant has been revived by new owners, Ray Carroll from the Beach House Cafe fame at Encounter Bay, and Dan Court, who has come from the McCracken resort. Their new business venture also brings freshness and new life to the marina.

– Eli Bickley, general manager
Marina Hindmarsh Island

Eli also doesn't look at the past and make criticism. Far greater developments internationally never recovered from the Global Financial Crisis of 2008 – and also didn't need to overcome a crippling drought that followed. It was a time when expensive yachts precariously hung from their mooring above the water lines that vanished, and owners took their boats elsewhere.

A realist, Eli acknowledges the 500-plus mooring sites at the marina are empty, but reminds us so many more boats are now moored at the front of new houses on the island. Once more he talks of the exciting recovery and new projects ahead under the new Mill Hill Capital banner, and especially how this take-over comes with passion and a responsibility to make TMHI venture one of the best of its kind in Australia.

"The initial focus for us is to get through this upcoming holiday period," Eli said. "From there it's about having a look at what we want to do and building relationships with council and the community. We want to open communication and work together to make this whole development be the best it can.

"If we do positive things here people will come. If the tavern is doing well, we will do well. If we bring more people in and boats in the tavern will do even better.

"At the moment it is about us doing a stocktake... doing the best with what we have and doing our best to have a good long-term plan for the next stages of this development.

"The GFC and the drought did have a devastating impact. Having said that, where we are now it's really onwards and upwards from here. We understand the challenges in front of us and we understand people need to see things happening.

"I believe in the very short space of time of acquiring the TMHI we have made positive changes that people can see.

"Yes, there are buildings vacant, including what used to be the old doctors surgery, but we are working hard to get people in there.

"But there are also a lot of positives, like the appointment of Ben Kelsey as the new marina manager. He comes with tremendous experience having been heavily involved in the development of Lincoln Cove Marina in Port Lincoln. Todd Bartlett, who is a well known local mechanic, is staying on looking after the service centre.

"Historically, petrol prices were very high here, but we are looking at upgrading the pumps. It won't happen quickly because there is a range of environment issues that need to be considered. We are very conscious of the environment here."

Eli doesn't come with a strong background in boats. "I'm no sailor," he says. But he knows real estate, and also has an impressive background in project management and finance. He also knows the value of a development like TMHI buying cars from McIlroy's in Victor Harbor, continuing the much-valued sponsorship of the Goolwa Regatta Yacht Club including its annual Milang-Goolwa Freshwater Classic this month, and looking locally when it comes to future employment opportunities.

"Things are changing here, and it is important for us to be part of the Goolwa, Hindmarsh Island and surrounding communities," Eli said.

Most of all, Eli sees the proverbial glass half-full. He genuinely believes the Marina Hindmarsh Island can be a real jewel in the crown for Goolwa and its surrounds like many had always hoped.

"People find it hard to believe that we are within an hour of a capital city yet you can have a water-front home for half a million dollars with your boat parked out the front... it's rare." Eli said. That's the salesmanship in him. And he's right. ■

When a street makes a village

The Strand, Port Elliot, postcode 5212, is one of those streets of character that you don't always find in a town. It runs from the main road south to the Southern Ocean, and on each side there is something special to discover. It's also gaining notoriety, thanks to a friendly pelican.

Iconic streets in rural towns are generally few and far between. Willunga can boast of the quaintness and history of its High St; Strathalbyn also has an incredibly wide High St that offers some amazing antique and collectors' gems.

Inside the century-old buildings the friendliness reflects these towns, and in their unique, invaluable way offer an enviable taste of the Fleurieu Peninsula.

However, if there were an extraordinary street that makes a village it is The Strand, Port Elliot. But it hasn't always been this way. It has taken a remarkable sense of pride, ingenuity if you like, to build or transform dwellings into stunning little 'must go inside' shops and still blend in extremely well with those steeped in history.

In between Hollywood movie sets residing at the top end, just off The Strand, is the home of Robert Scott Hicks, best known as the screenwriter and director of Shine, the Oscar-winning biopic of pianist David Helfgott.

The sporting identity is Shaun

Tait, who made a name for himself slinging a cricket ball at 155kph. These days he pours a perfect cold beer at a slower rate as co-owner of the Elliot Hotel. On the second Sunday of each month Quakers meet in the old, single-room Port Elliot Council Chamber built in 1879, and across the road is another heritage classic, the Institute, which is home to a throng of table tennis players who would play 24 x 7 if the delightful key keeper turned up. Ladies also come here for their quilt making, and down the road we have the local RSL Hall where our brave souls from the wars are always remembered with utmost reverence. There are some wonderful people down The Strand, characters and people with character, but the loveable Mr Percival is the new catalyst why tourists are flocking to Port Elliot. Of course, he's a pelican, and for the record, his namesake, star of the 1976 South Australian movie Storm Boy, died in 2009 aged 33. With the movie remake, due to be released mid-2018, the new Mr Percival is already having huge impact. The Strand six degrees of separation theory continues with the brilliant Geoffrey Rush having starred in both Shine and the Storm Boy re-make. With Mr Percival came a team of set makers who turned an old book store into a fish and chip shop, and the Jelly General Store, which had already had that fabulous retro look and feel about it, became an authentic late 1950s store, the era of the original story. Filming these relevant scenes would have been more appropriate in Goolwa, on which the movie is based, but only The Strand in this region had retained its wonderful heritage without a smattering of contrasting developments. Brent Tamblyn, owner of the Jelly General Store, a late 1800s building, could not be happier, and saw the movie set transformation as a huge plus for his business and Port Elliot as a whole. Tourists already familiar with the Storm Boy link come here to look at the store and they love it. Imagine when the movie is released. Brent said part of the deal with the production team was the need to change the appearance of the store. “I said, okay, but if you are prepared to leave this different look afterwards, and you do it properly and permanently by using proper exterior paint and so on, then we have a deal,” he said. “It worked for them because they would have needed to pay someone to re-paint and rework everything that was there. “We already had a big Rosella on the front of the store, but the film crew was so dedicated to having everything like it really was in 1959 that they went to extraordinary lengths to find original Rosella tomato sauce artwork from the late 1950s on the wall of an Alberton shop, and a local artist (James Stewart) went to work. “Inside there are the groceries; specially-printed old-looking labels on cans of peaches. Even the fish selection on the menu was from the era, including congoli.

“The authenticity was remarkable... the store has become a real stopping point and there are people out the front having their photo taken with the Rosella on the wall all the time. They ask questions, and it's great.”

"The authenticity was remarkable... the store has become a real stopping point and there are people out the front having their photo taken with the Rosellaw on the wall all the time. They ask questions, and it's great."

The thing is, The Strand had already developed into an attraction because it had the right landlords and business people with vision to make it all happen.

Ron Langman, with his partner Sonya Hender, turned the 1910 post office building on the corner of Arthur St into the exquisite The Strand gallery 18 months ago, and has now connected it with a new restaurant/coffee shop and wine bar to be operated by Campbell Haigh, who has ran the popular No.58 cafe and wine bar on Waterport Rd for some time. The gallery is sensational with its impressive exhibitions, while the just-opened wine bar development has seen The Strand further ooze with sheer class; another great reason to be here.

Ron describes The Strand as the "King William Rd, Hyde Park of the south coast." He talks about its character, and his gallery definitely raises the profile.

"The beach brings all the people here in the summer," Ron said.

"What we have noticed is that people used to come to Port Elliot and then have a look at the gallery, but now they are coming into the gallery and having a look at Port Elliot. We are drawing our own traffic, and so are other shops and businesses.

"You have population growth in Victor Harbor and good numbers in Goolwa, and we are that little boutique strip in the middle.

"In recent times Doug and Karen Gibson developed two great shops, Mist (contemporary art, fashion, homewares) and Hana Home (vintage and modern Japanese homewares, fashion, gifts), and now with the gallery and restaurant next door we have shifted the centre of gravity further along. We think The Strand is going to grow even more."

The Strand leads to spectacular ocean scenery, has its old boarding house and something for everyone including old wares and pre-loved clothes.

In many ways it has developed into its own little village, filled with interesting people from wide-ranging backgrounds. Mind you, none have attracted as much attention as the star himself, Mr Percival. Apologies Scott Hicks. And on a quiet night you can hear the table tennis lady rattle her keys. Such is life on The Strand. ■

OUR AWARD WINNING MAINSTREET PRECINCT

Fun, funky and fabulous. That's how the Victor Harbor Mainstreet Precinct was described when it took out the award for best public space and streetscape design at the Mainstreet SA Awards late last year.

Stage 1 of the Victor Harbor Mainstreet Precinct project was completed last September following four years of planning, consultation and design.

It has transformed the heart of Victor Harbor's town centre into a public space which builds on the seaside town character and historical connections.

Cosmic whales: A number of digital art projections play on rotation each night in the Victor Harbor Mainstreet Precinct

With a focus on functionality, accessibility, place and innovation, the design was inspired by the Southern Right Whale as a living icon for Victor Harbor and subsequently includes the creative use of paving, landscaping, drainage, art, lighting and furniture.

Implementation of the design delivers an adaptive, inspiring streetscape that encourages safer access for all, and an inviting public space for people to meet.

The digital art component of the project was highly praised by the judges, and one of the factors that set Victor Harbor's entry apart from a field of strong competitors.

MAYOR'S MESSAGE

The City of Victor Harbor has continued to show it is an award winning council.

Towards the end of 2017 the council was recognised for its work on the Mainstreet Precinct project, role in delivering the Fleurieu Aquatic Centre and was named Best Large Town in the KESAB Sustainable Communities' Awards.

These accolades are testament to the collective efforts of council and the community, and are a reflection of the great things ahead for Victor Harbor.

This month council welcomes Victoria MacKirdy who starts as CEO on 15 January.

VICTOR HORSE TRAM STALWART RETIRES

Mac, one of the stars of the Victor Harbor Horse Tram, is retiring. While there will be no gold watch, Mac can look forward to a lush green paddock and an easy life on a local property.

Mac has been pulling the tram across the Causeway for almost two decades. He is one of the most famous tramway Clydsdales, appearing on an Australia Post stamp in addition to countless tourism brochures and television programs, and prominent display on the billboard visitors pass when travelling into Victor Harbor via Adelaide Rd.

An asset to the horse tram operation during his 19 years of service, Mac loved the routine of work at the tram, often trying to sneak between the other horses to come into town on his rostered days off.

Three new Clydesdales have recently commenced work at the Tramway. New team members Isabella, Elliot and Murray will continue the legacy of tramway stalwart, Mac. They look forward to meeting you!

THE PEOPLE BEHIND THE SCENES OF OUR EVENTS

Care Vaughan has been the driving force behind the Victor Harbor Artisan Market since it commenced in January 2016.

She saw the Artisan Market as an important opportunity to help talented local artists share and sell their art, contributing to a sustainable arts sector in Victor Harbor.

As well as coordinating a team of volunteers who are critical in making the markets happen, Care undertakes a number of tasks including planning, logistics and promotion.

CARE VAUGHAN

Care says the hard work is worthwhile, and there is nothing better than taking a moment on a market day to see artists showing their talent and talking to the public about what they do, musicians drawing a crowd with their amazing talent, and children running around the Morton Bay fig trees while families settle in for the day.

If you are yet to experience Victor Harbor's popular Artisan Market, make sure you get to the next one.

The Artisan Market will be held in Railway Terrace, Victor Harbor on 21 January 2017.

TOUR DOWN UNDER COMES TO TOWN

The Santos Tour Down Under comes to Victor Harbor on 18 January.

The City of Victor Harbor will host the Stage 3 finish which again includes a 13km finishing circuit with three loops around the town.

The pro cyclists are expected to arrive in town around 2pm and will loop around Victor Harbor (from the Esplanade to the Ring Road and back) three times before finishing on the Esplanade opposite Warland Reserve.

Council is encouraging businesses and residents who live on the race route to add decorations and colour to their properties to help Victor Harbor secure the title of 'Best Dressed Town'.

Mount Compass and its surrounding region including the picturesque hidden valleys of Nangkita and Tooperang are part of a superb food and produce trail. Pick your own strawberries at Harvest the Fleurieu on the main road and enjoy a coffee, or pick your own cherries at the nearby Fleurieu Cherries on Pages Flat Rd. There are so many other delights to be discovered and devoured on this trail, not to mention the splattering of art galleries and pottery wares. A wonderful experience. Playgrounds

There are some great and safe as possible playgrounds across the Fleurieu, especially the Bristow Smith Reserve Nature Playground on Barrage Rd, Goolwa. Best of luck getting your children to leave the wooden boat and beach-like play areas. Great place for a picnic as you watch the birdlife on the River Murray.

Enjoy the beaches

There are some spectacular beaches along our sensational coastline, but some can also be dangerous with the rips. Make sure you swim where lifesavers are in attendance, and between the yellow flags. The Goolwa Beach is stunning with its crashing waves, by the beach at Second Valley on the western Fleurieu region is much calmer and absolutely beautiful – worth visiting.

Watch a movie

Victor Harbor is one of the few rural centres which still has its original movie theatre.

It's Victa Cinema is located in Ocean St, and the facilities are very good – all with the character of an old-time theatre. And if you go at night, the whole theatre is lit up on the front with a laser show. They always have the latest movie releases here. Coast Lines has a comprehensive guide in this issue, but visit the website for session times: www.victacinemas.com.au

Strathalbyn antiques

Like McLaren Vale, Strathalbyn is a gateway to the Fleurieu region and among many things this beautiful, friendly town is known throughout Australia as being the “antique capital”. Stroll through the clean and wide streets on a history trail and discover something special in every shop. You will need extra time in the bakeries, and you must visit the Garage Motorcycles shop.

The great catch a cockle challenge

Saturday, January 6

The Great Goolwa Cockle Challenge is coming to Goolwa Beach this summer.

Aquatic ecologists from Aquasave-NGT are monitoring and tagging cockles from Middleton to the Murray Mouth to assess spatial and temporal patterns in density and length structure, and to look at cockle movement. To help understand more about this species and be part of a great community day, recreational fishers and the community are encouraged to help catch tagged cockles on Saturday, January 6 at Goolwa Beach during the Great Goolwa Cockle Challenge. The event will include prizes for the capture of tagged cockles, information sessions on the ecology and management of this iconic species, cockle cooking demonstrations and tastings and a free BBQ. The event, funded by a SA Recreational Fishing Grant, aims to promote this iconic species by engaging the community as citizen scientists to find tagged pipis and learn more about the ecology and management of this species and about associated animals such as our local oystercatcher shorebirds. If anyone finds a tagged pipi prior to the event, could they please SMS Sylvia on 0438815489 with details about the catch time, location and size.

Warming to a new challenge

The temperature this time of the year in Bryn Coch, nestled in Neath in the county borough of beautiful Wales, hovers below zero. When Louise Davies and her husband Scott left there five years ago to live in Strathalbyn everybody told her she would experience nothing but warmth and sunshine.

So excited about a climate change Louise gave away all of her coats and umbrellas. This was perhaps the biggest early learning lesson of her life. While she still laughs at herself, it hasn't changed how much in love she has fallen in with our Fleurieu Peninsula.

Now, as the early learning director, she is ready to apply her educational skills when Investigator College opens its doors to 'Little Investigators' at its Victor Harbor Campus – children aged from 3½. The early learning program is a long-time coming, but not one bit surprising given the school's proven pathways. What Louise did bring with her from Wales was a lot of energy, a vibrant look at life through the eyes of young children and her vision of helping them thoroughly enjoy every day of school life. It's not necessarily about early lessons on mathematics, but working on the notion that children need to know it's wonderful to be curious and investigate what is placed before them in school life. Investigator is looking to neatly package the principles of the acclaimed Vegio Amelia philosophy, an Italian pedagogy or a method and practice of teaching, especially as an academic subject or theoretical concept.

Sounds serious, but it's simply acknowledging that by encouraging young children to start exploring their potential by making school such fun and a great place to be, they will want to turn up again the next day and again learn something new.

Louise sees herself as one of the partners in the learning journey of our children. She likes to work with children and their families, having a big emphasis on the classroom environment as well as being the third teacher.

"I have a passion for teaching young children," Louise said. "If the children are disinterested in what they are doing then my job is to make sure they love coming to school every day just as much as I do.

"I self-reflect a lot; I am always wanting to improve. Sometimes children need that extra support to get them going, and I love it when everything starts clicking for them. They start achieving and reaching their potential. That's the bull's eye. Working with families and forming close partnerships in their best interest and that of their child.

Children have a natural ability to be curious and investigate, and it is important that we build on that.”

– Investigator College Early Learning director Louise Davies

"I love it when children just tell you as it is. I like character. If they are more introverted I like to work on bring out their personality a bit more. Socially and emotionally it is important that they feel they are in a really good place."

Louise has more than 10 years experience working with young children, and she leaves no doubt her new role comes with tremendous responsibility.

"The early years can be a grounding for their school life and that's why I feel my job is really important," Louise said. "It's that first experience of school; it sets the children up for life. We need to get that right.

"Children have a natural ability to be curious and investigate, and it is important that we build on that. Those interactions that you have with them are unique, and generally from those observations you pick up a lot... our job is to work alongside them and develop that further.

"When I first came over here I didn't have a clue about the education system. I was skills assessed and I basically got lost. I feel I have gone on a path and I have had signs along my journey directing me here to Investigator College. I am excited by this challenge, and our plan is to live here in Victor Harbor."

Louise, there is no need to throw away the coats and umbrellas you brought in Strathalbyn just yet. ■

A real passion for toys and cars

Some call their cars toys, and that's exactly what the Historic Motor Vehicles Club is presenting in two big events in Victor Harbor in coming weeks.

There is the Toys, Models & Collectables Market – a huge boost from the original Toy Fair – at the HMVC clubrooms in Jolly St on Saturday, January 13, and the annual Victor Harbor Autojumble Swap Meet at Encounter Bay Oval on Sunday, February 4.

The interest in toys has grown so much that organisers felt a need to expand the show to include a market. For the owners, a lot of it is about re-living their childhood days and maintaining the fascination of toys.

Brett Schild, of Victor Harbor, has an early 1950s pedal car. Wayne Lamont boasts of a rare Orange County Chopper fire bike miniature that has lights and moving parts that was a tribute model for the New York 9/11 victims, while Dean Solly has a vintage Barbie Ferrari and an old Hills Kangaroo rocker.

And when it comes to the autojumble, it's almost like the front doors of Myers in the city for the post Boxing Day sales. Sellers and buyers line-up from 7am at the Encounter Bay Oval, and just about every car or motorbike part that you can think of is bought or sold. It's an experience even if you aren't into parts swapping. It costs just $2.50 for adults to the toy market, and $5 for sellers and buyers at the autojumble, but nothing for the hour-long conversation if you ask all these passionate men and women about their cars or toys. ■

BRAINSNACK® ©PETERFRANK. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

The aim of the Futoshiki puzzle is to fit the numbers 1 to 5 into the 5x5 grid, so that every row and column contains every number only once. You also have to satisfy the less than (<) and greater than (>) signs. A less-than sign, <, means that the number it points at must be less than the number on the other side of the sign. Turned around the other way it becomes a greater-than sign, >, but the logic is still the same - the number it points at is smaller than the number on its other side. By paying attention to these inequality signs, some of the possibilities from the squares can be eliminated. Each Futoshiki puzzle has only one solution.

An old charmer

Bob, a 70-year-old, extremely wealthy widower, shows up at the country club with a breathtakingly 25-year-old woman. She is absolutely stunning.

Everyone is amazed by her beauty and charm, and how she hangs over Bob's arm and listens to his every word. His mates at the club are all aghast. At the first chance they ask: "How did you get a trophy girlfriend?"

Bob says: "Girlfriend? She is my wife."

They are further stunned. They ask: "So, how did you persuade her to marry you?"

Bob confesses: "I lied about my age."

One mate asks: "Did you tell her you were only 50?"

And Bob says: "No, I told her I was 97."

Perfect match

Sam is 32-years-old and still single. A mate asks: "Hey Sam, why aren't you married, can't you find a woman who will be a good wife?"

Sam says: "Actually, I've met many women I wanted to marry, but when I took them home to meet my parents my mother didn't like them."

His mate says: "Why don't you find a girl just like your mother?"

A few months later they meet again and Sam's friend asks: "Did you find the perfect girl just like your mother and she likes her?"

Sam frowns and says: "Yeah, she was just like my mother, and you're right, she liked the girl very much."

The mate says: "Then what's the problem?"

And Sam says: My father doesn't like her."

Star sign

A university professor is called to the scene of a magnificent celestial display at Milang. As he watches a bright object dash through the sky the media gathers around him. Journalists from all over the world push and shove to ask questions. A reporter says: "Professor, what we have just seen, is it really a UFO?"

And the professor says: "No comet."

Hold on...

During a bank robbery the Inspector at the Victor Harbor Police Station tells a young constable to cover all exits so the robbers cannot get away.

Later, the constable reports to the Inspector: "Sorry sir, but the robbers got away."

The Inspector is angry. "I told you to cover all exits."

The constable says: "I did, but they got away through the entrance."

Boom, boom...

A young man was in love with two women and cannot decide which of them to marry. Finally, he goes to a marriage counsellor, who asks him: "Please describe your two loves."

The man says: "Well, one is a great poet, and the other makes delicious pancakes."

And the counsellors says: "I see... so you can't decide whether to marry for batter or for verse."

Doctor, doctor...

A man comes running into the surgery and yells: "Doctor, doctor, my son just swallowed an old roll of film." The doctor says: "Well, let's just wait and see what develops."

Another bloke waiting says: "Doctor, doctor... I have a ringing noise in my ears." The doctor says: "Don't anser it."

The bloke next to him says: "Doctor, doctor... I think I'm a bell." And the doctor says: "Here, take these and if they don't work give me a ring."

The surgery gets busier. A bloke sitting in the corner says: "Doctor, doctor... I think I'm a deck of cards." The doctor says: "I'll deal with you later."

Dad jokes

Why wouldn't the oyster share its pearl? It was shellfish.

Why couldn't the pirate play cards? He was sitting on the deck. What do you call a sleeping cow? A bulldozer.

What did Batman say to Robin before they got in the car? Robin, get in the car.

What did the digital watch say to his mum while he was driving? "Look mum no hands."

What do you have if you have 100 rabbits in a row and 99 step back? A receding hare line. What do you get when you cross a snake and a kangaroo? A jump rope.

Why do giraffes have long necks? Because they have smelly feet.

What's orange and sounds like a parrot? A carrot.

Get into gardening to get fit

Happy New Year! Have you made a New Year's resolution? Did it have anything to do with getting fit or being healthy? Well, here's a way to achieve both of these things at once.

Get into gardening! Get out there and dig into it. Get yourself a clean slate, and plant healthy food, and then feast all year round on your very own crops. How rewarding.

It's the harshest time of the year for our poor little gardens and especially the veggies. This is not the ideal time of year to be planting most herbs and veggies, but there are a few that might be able cope, like watermelon, rockmelon, pineapple and mangoes (depending on your location).

Some things you may be able to plant at the end of the month: eggplant, zucchini, cucumber, capsicum, chillies, tomatoes, lettuce, asparagus and lemongrass.

Anything that is planted during this time should be watched and watered regularly, and may even require some kind of shade/shelter from the hot winds and searing heat.

Water is often in short supply at this time of the year. We have been fortunate the last couple of years to have wetter summers, but this is not always the case. A long, deep water even only a few times a week is more effective than a smaller, daily water. This goes for lawns as well.

Wicking beds are very effective for reducing water consumption, and for giving your plants a 'bottom up' watering system, which prevents roots growing upwards and drying out, evaporation, and many other factors.

Happy Gardening!

Emily

Security Matters

with Peter Schirmer

Crime does not take a holiday

Welcome back and what a great start to 2018 we are having. We hope everyone had a lovely and safe festive season.

We may now have some new toys or things of value we have received or brought over the last few months, and it's very important to remember to include these in our insurance and security plans. Take photographs of new items of value and log all serial numbers. Even invest in having your driver's licence number engraved into the base of items, this can increase the chances of items being returned in the event of a theft or lost items.

You may be considering heading home from your holiday house or finally getting away after the busy festive season... don't forget to ensure you have your property maintained and secure. If you have a security system, spray around sensors with barrier spray, and remove all dust and cobwebs. Also, have a look around your home. Have you moved some furniture or purchased something new? Sometimes this can affect the way your security system is working. Ensure all devices have a clear field of view and are not obstructed and don't have detectors looking at large mirrors. We are always happy to talk to you about security matters and forward you an obligation free quotation for your home or business.

We will get a lot of visitors here over the coming months and its paramount to lock everything away and high end products removed from outside vehicles and boats. This can be also said about, walk away items around your home including: mowers, tools, ladders, and equipment etc. Some crims are so brazen that they may attempt to enter your home or business while you're there, so keep doors locked and report all incidents of theft to police no matter how small.

We all get a little tired this time of year, and if your Christmas lunch was as big as mine it's sometimes hard to get much done til the food settles. However, please don't get complacent about the little things, especially when it comes to your security. I have already attended so many security situations over the past month and most could have been avoided if just a little bit of effort was made to put things away.

Police will be out in force as always, the parties will continue throughout January and remember if you're going out tonight so are the police. Drive safely so we can all do it again next year. Happy New Year!

Sweet & Sour Pork Kebabs

Ingredients

1 tbs salt-reduced tomato sauce
1/2 tsp reduced-salt soy sauce
1 1/2 tsp white vinegar
400 g pork fillet, trimmed of fat, cut into 2cm cubes
1/4 pineapple, peeled, cut into 2-3cm pieces
1 red capsicum, seeded and cut into 2-3cm pieces
1 yellow capsicum, seeded and cut into 2-3cm pieces
1 zucchini, cut into 2-3cm pieces
1 red onion, peeled, cut into 2-3cm pieces
8 small button mushrooms
8 thick bamboo sticks
olive or canola oil spray
4 cups steamed rice (from 2 cups uncooked rice), to serve

Method

Mix sauces and vinegar in a small bowl. Add pork, stir to coat and set aside to marinate. To prevent burning, cover skewers in a shallow bowl with water.

Preheat barbecue grill on high heat. Thread pork and vegetables alternately onto skewers, ending with mushrooms.

Spray skewers with oil and barbecue each side for 2 minutes until pork is cooked through, basting kebabs with remaining marinade occasionally.

Transfer to plates and serve with rice.

Hint: Cover and refrigerate marinated pork for as long as time permits, from 30 minutes to overnight. Skewered kebabs can be prepared in advance and refrigerated until ready to barbecue.

Variation:

Replace fresh pineapple with pineapple chunks canned in natural juice.
